

Students at the University of South Carolina who might have late classes may miss campus sporting events that award points for football game tickets, creating an unfair disadvantage in accessing game attendance opportunities.